

INTERIORS special

Pillowcases, £106 each, Angela Wickstead

"Don't save your best bed linens for special occasions. Treat yourself to a wonderful night's sleep and use them every day."
Angela Wickstead, linens designer

"I love a low shelf, they automatically give a room some dimension – repurpose any piece of wood or a long mirror to build one against a wall and put beautiful books on it. I use plinths in my showroom, but they can give a gallery look to a living room, too. Recently, I've discovered the beauty of fallen branches found on long walks, they look dramatic placed in a vase instead of fresh flowers, which you constantly have to replace."
Anissa Kermiche, jewellery and ceramics designer

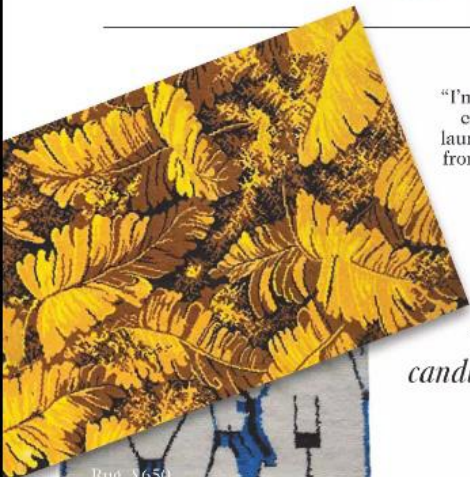

"Applying a new colour to walls, ceilings or other surfaces is transformational. If you need inspiration for the perfect hue, use existing artworks or furniture to guide your palette, or just look out of the window."
Kelly Wearstler, interior designer

Rug, $650. A New Tribe. Above: carpet to order, Codimat

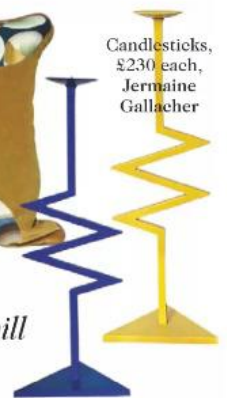

"I'm really drawn to oversized, patchwork cushions at the moment. For our newly launched shop, Sister, we recycled offcuts from past Studio Ashby projects to create some utterly gorgeous pieces. Making something new from something old is definitely my tip for the season."
Sophie Ashby, creative director of Studio Ashby

Cushions, £175 each, Sister by Studio Ashby

"Make way for new finds. Something bold and ballsy – a zigzag candlestick, say, or a pair of shelf brackets from my latest collection – will shake things up." Jermaine Gallacher, interior designer

Candlesticks, £230 each, Jermaine Gallacher

"Bring in a design refresh with a playful carpet. We recently used Madeleine Castaing's Feuilles de Bananiers for a fun project." Duncan Campbell, co-founder of Campbell-Rey

Barley paint, from £13.50, Bauwerk Colour

"I am mad about limewashed walls. I used Barley from a brand called Bauwerk Colour, and the chalky, uneven finish is the perfect backdrop for poppy colours and prints."
Matilda Goad, interior designer

Chairs, $450 each, Oswalde Shop

"We could all do with a chic home-office chair nowadays, and I love this retro design by Joe Colombo for Kartell." Jenna Fletcher, founder of Oswalde Shop
